Nicholas Bachko, Jr. '66

It is with deep regret that we record the sudden death of Nicholas Bachko on February 5, 1967 in Albuquerque, New Mexico.

Nick graduated from Port Washington High School in New York, where he received the American Legion History Award. He received the highest score on the New York State Regents Exam and was a National Merit Scholarship finalist and a member of the National Honor Society.

Nick came to Princeton as a University Scholar. Although he concentrated in astrophysics, his wide interest in literature and the arts remained a constant course of enjoyment to him as well as to those of us who knew him well. His friends and roommates will long remember his friendliness and loyalty. We will miss his wit and his accepting appreciation of all of life.

After graduation from Princeton Nick began graduate work in astrophysics at the University of New Mexico. While returning to Albuquerque from the wedding of a friend, he was caught in a sudden blizzard and was fatally injured when he was struck by an oncoming car.

To his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Bachko of Port Washington, New York, and to his sister Laura, we extend our deepest sympathy.

Robert Quincy Baker III '66

At Princeton, Quincy was an electrical engineering major, a member of Whig-Clio, and a member of the Pistol Club. After completing a master's in engineering at Columbia University Quincy earned a JD at Ohio State University. He then returned to his hometown of Coshocton and joined the firm of Frase, Weir, Baker and McCullough as an attorney, where he worked for his entire career. At the time of his death Quincy was the village solicitor for the town of West Lafayette.

Quincy was a member of the Sacred Heart Catholic Church, the Ohio Bar Assn., the Coshocton Bar Assn., the Pomerene Center for the Arts, and the Coshocton Gun Club. He was a Republican. He was also a board member of Camp Echoing Hills and a past president of the Coshocton City Council.

Quincy is survived by his brother, W. Richard Baker, and two sisters, Phyllis Weih and Karen Mitzner. To each of them, the class extends its sympathies.

F. Martin Belmore '66

Marty died on Sept. 5, 2004, in Skokie, Ill., after suffering a cerebral hemorrhage. He was 60.

Marty was the son of Frederick Martin Belmore, who helped develop the atomic bomb and was director of the Atomic Energy Commission. A graduate of Webster Groves High School in Missouri, Marty majored in economics at Princeton, rowed freshman crew, and was a member of Elm Club, the flying club, and the Orange Key Society.

After Princeton, Marty studied politics, philosophy, and economics at University College at Oxford, graduated from Harvard Law School, and earned a master's in taxation from New York University. He spent most of his career with the international law firm of Mayer, Brown, serving as an international tax specialist in the firm's Chicago home office until his retirement in 1999.

Marty was devoted to public transportation. He never owned an automobile, relying on public transportation, his feet, and, on rare occasions, a taxi. Over the years he served on numerous Chicago commissions concerned with transportation issues.

Rexford Taylor Brown '66

We lost Rex on October 16, when he died peacefully in his sleep at his home, in Jackson, Mississippi.

Rex grew up in Shaker Heights, Ohio, and graduated from Shaker Heights High, where he wrestled, played baseball and football, and served as a class officer. At Princeton he majored in history, served as a football manager, and belonged to Cap and Gown, where he was Interclub Athletic Association director.

After Princeton Rex went on to University of Michigan Law School, receiving his J.D. degree in 1969. He practiced law in Washington, D.C., and Tokyo, as a specialist in securities law. Following that, for the last 26 years of his life, Rex lived and practiced law in Jackson, concentrating primarily in appellate law.

Rex was an avid outdoorsman and especially loved golf and fishing. He had a deep intellectual curiosity and a dry wit.

We will miss Rex. We extend our sympathy to his brother and sister-in-law, Judge and Mrs. Charles E. Brown, Jr., and to the Brown family.

Warren Randolph Brundage, Jr. '66

Randy Brundage died in the crash of a Navy plane on July 13, 1967. A 2nd Lt in the Marine Corps, he was training to become a navigator-bombardier when the jet trainer carrying him and four others went down in Georgia.

Randy was born on Oct. 20, 1944, in Brooklyn, NY. He attended Wall High School in Manasquan Park, NJ, before coming to Princeton. At Wall, he captained the football, basketball and golf teams in his senior year. He was active in the student council, and was a member of the Honor Society as well.

Randy was equally energetic at Princeton. Writing his thesis for the Politics department with Professor Falkner, he undertook a study of the Supreme Court's enforcement of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. It was his most satisfying endeavor as an undergraduate. Randy played football his freshman year, and varsity golf as a junior. In his second year at Princeton he joined Cottage Club. He held a Navy ROTC scholarship which led to his commission in the Marine Corps.

To describe briefly what we lost when Randy Brundage died is impossible. He was an individual, a personality. Probably his most outstanding quality was his sense of humor; certainly he was best known for it. It expressed at once all his great optimism, enthusiasm for living, compassion for others, and confidence in himself. He knew himself well, and was often the subject of his own humor. Evident in his character was a deep spirituality which made him a strong person, yet at the same time an understanding one.

Randy Brundage's good nature was infectious. He was a happy person, and made others so. He was able to draw one out, to make one forget oneself. For this reason he became important to many people. From him one learned to enjoy things as they were, and not to worry about how they might have been. He gave freely of himself, and we benefited in having known him. Nothing better can be said of anyone.

Randy was especially proud of the Marine Corps, and of his part in it. Nevertheless, the tragedy of his death remains undiminished. With his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Brundage, Sr., and his sister, Mrs. Mary Jean Kraft, the Class shares a feeling of great loss.

Ronald Emerson Burns '66

Ronald Emerson Burns died of cancer at his home in Cambridge, Mass., July 25, 2003. He was 60.

Ron invented a computer-based X-ray detector for molecular analysis that provided a technological leap forward for the science of X-ray crystallography. He developed the detector in the 1980s after working at the High Energy Physics Lab at Harvard. Leaving Harvard with only a mental picture of how his detector would function, Ron worked for years in his Cambridge basement, designing and building the tools needed to construct the detector. In his spare time, he worked on and raced motorcycles.

Ron started the firm Xentronics to manufacture his detector. Xentronics was sold first to Nicolet, and then to Siemens AG, which in turn sold it to Bruker AXS. Professor Stephen Harrison of Harvard Medical School used the technology to examine viral binding to cell surfaces and said, "The Xentronics detector changed structural biology in a significant way."

After successfully marketing his invention, Ron dedicated his remaining years to becoming an accomplished aerobatic pilot and instructor.

He is survived by his wife, Janet, son, Jason, and granddaughter, Ripley Burns. To them, the class extends its deep sympathy.

Charles Madison Cannon '66

Chuck Cannon died on June 7, 1966 when he was struck by lightning in Rye, New York, five days before he was to graduate from Princeton. The bolt struck Chuck as he was leaving the Shamrock Shore Club. A companion, Janet Murkland, of Glen Cove, Maryland, suffered burns and shock.

Born on August 18, 1943, in White Plains, New York, to Dr. and Mrs. John Cannon, Chuck graduated from Scarsdale High School, where he was a member of the football, wrestling, baseball and golf teams. Chuck held offices in the Varsity Club, the Senior Class Council, and the yearbook Committee.

At Princeton, Chuck majored in biology and wrote a thesis for Dr. Rebhun concerned with contractile mechanisms in Stentor polymorphus. A member of Quadrangle Club, Chuck rowed with the freshman lightweight crew and joined the Outing Club. He lived in the Taj, Quadrangle's dormitory suite in the first entry of Blair Hall, and played on a number of IAA squads during his last two years. Chuck was one of the few men to ever earn a 1-plus in Professor Wallis' organic chemistry course. He earned Dean's List honors in his sophomore and junior years. His plans upon graduation entailed fulfilling his NROTC commitment, followed by medical school.

In honor of his memory, a 2.2-acre research pond was created in Princeton University's Stony Ford Center for Field Studies. His naval science professor, Colonel Thomas J. Ahern, called the tragedy of Chuck's death "a one-in-a-million accident for a one-in-a-million boy – one of the finest students I've ever taught."

Randall Meads Chastain '66

Randy died May 23, 2004.

He was born in Nampa, Idaho, and graduated from Jefferson High School in Edgewater, Colo., where he excelled in academics, sports, drama, and student government. At Princeton, he continued to excel academically, studying in the Special Program in International Affairs and writing his thesis on NATO; and in a wide range of extracurricular activities, including WPRB, Whig-Clio, Orange Key, and the Trenton Tutorial Project. He served as treasurer of Key and Seal Club his senior year.

After graduation from Princeton, Randy enrolled in Yale Law School, graduating in 1970 with an outstanding academic record. He practiced and taught law for most of his life, for many years maintaining a practice in Columbia, S.C., and serving as a full professor at the University of South Carolina Law School. Sadly, in the mid-1990s, a series of professional and legal lapses, which Randy attributed to depression and emotional problems, ended his legal and teaching careers.

Randy is survived by a daughter, Samantha Kovaz; a grandson, Stephen Kovaz; and a sister, Verna Morris. The class extends its condolences to all three.

Tony Cook, died on April 9, 2008 in Denver after an 8 year battle with prostate cancer. Additional information will be available soon.

Arthur F. Davidsen '66

The class lost one of our country's most distinguished astrophysicists when Art Davidsen died July 19, 2001. Art had a recurring lung disorder, and died in the arms of his wife, Frauke. He was 57. Art came to Princeton from Freeport, N.Y., and roomed with Steve Reich '66, T. R. Reid '66, and Fred Talcott '66. That's the crew that invented J.D. Oznot '68, and Art was at the center of the plot. He took Oznot's SAT exams and was furious that he scored only 792 on the math test. Art played many instruments and was the mainstay of a rock band that included Dave Kidd '66. After serving on a destroyer during Vietnam and earning a PhD in astronomy at Berkeley, Art joined the physics faculty at Johns Hopkins. The NY Times wrote that he was the "prime mover in transforming the university into an astronomical powerhouse." Art was one of the world's leading experts on the intergalactic medium, the primordial ooze left over from the Big Bang. The license plate on his beloved Harley-Davidson Fatboy read "HUT-PI," representing another of his titles, principal investigator for the Hopkins Ultraviolet Telescope. He is survived by Frauke, two sons, and two stepsons.

Mark L. Davidson '66

Mark Davidson lost his battle against cancer June 18, 1998. Mark died in Washington, D.C., where he had been in government service as deputy director of the Bureau of Competition at the Federal Trade Commission and later in private law practice. He had been in Washington for 20 years. A graduate of Horace Mann H.S. in NYC, Mark entered Princeton with the Class of '67. His brilliant intellect surfaced early, and he graduated in three years with us. He was a Woodrow Wilson Scholar, a member of Campus Club, and a talented member of the Triangle Club. Throughout his life, Mark always had the ability to entertain his friends and colleagues. He was an avid member of the monthly Class of '66 Lunch Bunch in D.C. After Princeton, Mark attended Columbia Law School and was a Harlan Fiske Scholar. In the private legal practice and in government service, Mark demonstrated his agile mind and energetic enthusiasm. Later, he had his own firm. To Mark's mother, Bernice Rogers, his brother, James, and his longtime devoted friend, Nellie Chao, the class extends its deep sympathy. Break a leg, Mark!

Richard Dodsworth de Camp '66

RICHARD DODSWORTH DE CAMP died of brain cancer Mar. 19, 1994. When he died, Dick had spent more than 20 years working for the city of Seattle, ultimately as fleet manager of its motor vehicles.

After graduation, Dick spent a "difficult year" teaching English in the N.Y.C. school system. He moved to Seattle in 1967, where he studied for a Ph.D. in Chinese history and became involved in protesting the Vietnam war. His activism shifted to community development and community service, to which he dedicated his career.

Dick also built boats, ran marathons, did mountaineering, cycled, and sailed. He raised two sons from his first marriage and four sons from his marriage to Ann Morello (Bellevue Community College '76). His passion for understanding and deepening the human spirit was evident in all his pursuits. He loved art, music, theater, and travel, and respected the fierceness of nature and its importance to the soul.

Dick prepared at Choate. At Princeton, he majored in history and was in Charter Club.

Dick is survived by his widow, Annie; sons Joseph (born while we were at Princeton) and Allan; stepsons Lance, Rob, Scott, and Sundance Alba; granddaughter Marlin; mother Georgia; and two sisters, Laura Shields and Joan Zdenek. The class extends deepest condolences to each of them.

Marcel Doublier '66

MARCEL "RICK" DOUBLIER, physician and tireless researcher into a cure for AIDS, has been claimed by complications resulting from the disease whose cure he fought so valiantly to find. He died Sept. 27, 1993. He was 49.

Rick had trained and lived in South Florida since our graduation. He received his M.D. from the Univ. of Miami in 1970, and entered private practice, specializing in internal medicine and infectious diseases there in 1973. He served as chief of Mercy Hospital's division of infectious diseases and was on the board of advisors of Miami's Health Crisis Network. To the end, he was involved in intensive research, through his work with the Community Consortium of AIDS Physicians, in a quest for a cure for the disease he fought on a personal and professional level.

At Princeton, Rick majored in biology and took his meals at Dial Lodge. He sang in the Chapel Choir and was a member of the Pre-Med Society. Rick entered Princeton from Mountain Lakes (N.J.) H.S., where he captained the tennis and debate teams.

Rick is survived by a brother, Rene '62; a niece, Michele; and a nephew, Rene. In addition, he is survived by two uncles, George and Edward. To each of them, the class offers its deepest sympathy.

Robert D. Dreiss '66

Bob was born on January 22, 1945, in Pampa, Texas, and came to Princeton from Annandale high School in Virginia, where he won the Scholar-athlete award for his performance in football, wrestling, and golf and was a member of the Senior Honor Society.

At Princeton, Bob as a senior captained the 150-pound football team, rowed on the varsity lightweight crew, and worked with Dr. Bruce of the biology department on his thesis, The Effects of Photoperiod on Metabolic Cycles in Euglena. He lived alone in 181 Little Hall, ate at Cannon Club, and was a Chapel Deacon and a member of the pre-Med Society.

The son of Colonel and Mrs. Edward Dreiss of Costa Mesa, California, Bob graduated from Baylor Medical School in June 1970 before entering into medical practice. Surviving him are his wife Meredith, his daughter Adrienne, and his parents.

Richard J. Dzimiskiewicz '66

Richard died Sept. 16, 2001. He entered Princeton with the Class of '64. He worked as a busboy in Commons and joined Dial Lodge in the spring of his sophomore year. He left Princeton in 1962, after his sophomore year, and did not return until two years later, when he joined the Class of '66. However, after one more year, Richard left Princeton again and did not return for his senior year.

Princeton's records of Richard's post-college life are sketchy. It appears that at the time of his death he was a retired master sergeant in the Air Force, and that he lived most of his adult life in Miami. In 1992, Richard reestablished ties with Princeton through AG, and he was consistently generous until his death a decade later.

The Class of '66 regrets his death and our loss of connection to this unique member of the Princeton family.

Archibald Cameron Elias '66

Arch died of lung cancer on July 10, 2008

Arch grew up in Philadelphia and prepared for Princeton at the Pomfret School, where he was president of his class and of the student body, as well as editor of the school newspaper and founder, editor, and treasurer of a literary magazine.

At Princeton he majored in English, belonged to Campus Club, and served as editorial chairman of The Daily Princetonian. Following graduation, he continued his English studies, receiving his master's from Stanford and doctorate from Yale. He devoted his entire career to research, publishing, and lecturing, gaining recognition as a leading scholar on Jonathan Swift, who had been the subject of his senior thesis at Princeton.

He and his late wife, Susan Homans Elias, lived in Philadelphia and reared four children: Abigail, Margaret, Clara, and Joseph, all of whom survive him. In 2006 he married Jane Iandola Watkins, who also survives him.

Arch's interests included gardening, fishing, and natural history. His classmates will remember him fondly for his intellect, his ardent traditionalism, and his courtly, old-word bearing. We extend our heartfelt condolences to Jane and to his children.

Michael Jessup Evans '66

Born on October 31, 1941, in Cleveland, Ohio, to Raymond F. and Elizabeth Evans, Mike died on January 10, 1975. He entered Princeton from Tabor Academy in Marion, Massachusetts, following in the footsteps of his father, Raymond F. '31, and his brother, T. Raymond '57. A history major, Mike worked with Professor Sigmund on the problem of British colonial relations in East Africa. He lived alone senior year and ate his meals at Cap and Gown. Mike participated in the ATRENTON Tutorial Project and was a member of the African Affairs Committee. He is survived by his wife, Lynn, of Watertown, Massachusetts; three brothers, T. Raymond, Whitney and Andrew W, and his parents.

The Class learned only this spring of the death of Dick Farrell in March 1984.

A native of Teaneck, New Jersey, Dick graduated from the Gilman School in Baltimore. At Princeton he majored in history and wrote his senior thesis on the fiscal policies of the British Labour Party. He was a member of the glee club, as he had been in prep school.

Dick was a member of Campus Club, where he was well regarded for his easy-going manner and wit. His senior year he roomed in the Taj with Rick Buck, Jeff Reichel, and Chuck Cannon.

In the spring of our freshman year, Dick earned a permanent place in Princeton annals: his playing of the bagpipes one evening is generally regarded as the opening salvo in what became known as the Princeton Riot of '63—an event that was front-page news all over the nation. (It was a slow news day, and those were simpler times.)

Frank H. Frederick, son of Mrs. Evelyn M. Frederick, died on November 3, 1970, following an illness of two and a half years. Raised in Richmond Hill, New York, Frank attended Lawrenceville School before entering Princeton. While at Princeton, Frank earned numerals in freshman basketball and majored in psychology. He took his meals at Colonial Club. Surviving are his wife, Cynthia Bull Frederick of Flushing, New York, and his mother, of Richmond Hill, New York.

Theodore M. French '66

Ted died on Sept. 23, 2001, in the Forest Haven Nursing Home in Catonsville, Md., from complications of a kidney disease. Ted was born in NYC, the son of Theodore '38. He attended Choate before coming to Princeton, where he majored in chemistry, was a member of the Judo Club, the Karate Club, the Pistol Club, and Key and Seal. Ted earned a doctoral degree in physical chemistry from the UC-Berkeley, in 1971, working on problems associated with the basic physics of semiconductors. He began his career as an industrial research chemist, working first with Princeton Chemical Research on catalyst evaluation, and later for Gammaflux and Versar, where he became interested in determining the fate of environmental pollutants. After a period of service at the OSHA National Laboratory in Salt Lake City, Ted finished his career at Enviro Control in Rockville, Md., where he did hazard evaluation and predicted the environmental fate of priority pollutants. Ted spent much of his time later in life in northern California, where he enjoyed mountain climbing and rock climbing.

To his mother, Katherine w'38, the class extends its sympathy and support.

Joseph Craig Graddy '66

JOSEPH CRAIG GRADDY perished July 15, 1990, in a trekking accident along the Inca Trail in the Andes Mountains of Peru. He fell 300 feet to his death while photographing a panoramic view.

Outdoors activities and concern for the outdoors were always important to Joe. He loved the mountains and the woods. As a youth growing up in California, he had hiked extensively in the Sierra Mountains and climbed Mt. Whitney. His love of nature's splendor took him to Vermont, Utah, Colorado, New Mexico, and Canada for skiing and hiking.

Born in Santa Monica and raised in the Los Angeles area, Joe prepared for Princeton at the Harvard School in North Hollywood, Calif., where he captained the wrestling team. At Princeton, he was a member of the freshman fencing team and Terrace Club.

He withdrew from Princeton in 1964, studied at the Univ. of Copenhagen and received a degree in mechanical engineering from U.C.L.A. and an M.B.A. from the Univ. of Washington.

Joe never married, At the time of his death he was employed by the Dept. of the Interior in the Bureau of Mineral Management. He owned a home on Bull Run Mountain in Haymarket, Va.

He is survived by his parents, Joseph and Jean Graddy who live in Pacific Palisades, Calif. His mother's words echo the sentiments of the Class of 1966: "We miss Joe, but few people are fortunate enough to leave this earth doing something they love and enjoy."

James Roby Green '66

JAMES ROBY GREEN, gifted teacher and an effective advocate for improving the quality of health care provided to women in the San Francisco area, was taken from us by cancer on Mar. 10, 1993, in San Francisco. He was 48.

At the time of his passing, Jim was acting chief of obstetrics/ gynecology and reproductive sciences at San Francisco General Hospital. He was also associate clinical professor of ob/gyn. Since arriving in 1977, he campaigned for improvements in the capacity and quality of SFGH's obstetric facilities. In Dec. 1992, S.F.G.H. dedicated its new delivery room in his honor. Also during his tenure at S.F.G.H., he established a nurse-midwifery service, served as medical director of the program that trained nurse-midwives, and was chief ob/gyn from 1989 to 1990.

Those achievements prompted Jim's widow, April Thompson Green, to remember him in this way: "Jim worked tirelessly during his entire career to provide the highest quality of teaching to medical students, midwives, and residents and to insure that women of color or for whom English was not their native language received obstetrical care at or above community standards." She also observed that Jim's love, gentleness, and quite wry humor are sorely missed by his entire family.

Jim was born in NYC and prepared for Princeton at the Kent School, from which he was graduated cum laude. At Princeton, he took his meals at Campus Club and majored in biology. His senior thesis, "The Role of Olfaction in Reproduction," foreshadowed his life's work.

In addition to April, Jim is survived by two children, Emily Christine and Christopher James. He is also survived by two sisters, Patricia and Miki. To all of them, the Class of 1966 extends its sympathy.

Robert Edward Greenlaw '66

Bob came to Princeton from Houston's Spring Branch HS, where he served on the student council and football team and as senior class president. At Princeton Bob majored in civil engineering and was a member of Dial Lodge. His activities included the Jamesburg Visitation Program and, as he proudly noted in our Nassau Herald, service as a volunteer Volkswagen carrier in the Spring Riot of 1963.

After graduation Bob married Martha McClintock and moved to St. Louis, where he worked for McDonnell Aircraft. In 1970 he returned to Houston and entered the field of general contracting, serving as vice president of Spaw Glass Construction. He was an inventor and held numerous patents.

Bob's greatest passion was ministry. He worked in a number of Bible churches and eight years ago began an outreach to China. Bob also loved helping churches, missions, and friends build homes and churches.

To Bob's mother, wife Martha, children Todd, Greg, Robert and Rebekah, and seven grandchildren, the class extends its heartfelt sympathy.

Joseph Gales Greenleaf '66

Lieutenant Joseph Gales Greenleaf, USN, was killed on April 4, 1972, in South Vietnam when the aircraft he was piloting was shot down about eight miles south of the DMZ near Cam Lo during a bombing mission. Joe and his co-pilot, who was also killed, were serving with Fighter Squadron 114 stationed aboard the U.S.S. Kitty Hawk.

Joe was born on October 6, 1944, in Boston, a son of Dr. Henry and Elizabeth Greenleaf. He attended the Kingswood School in West Hartford, Connecticut, where he was active in sports and student government. Joe gained admission to the U.S. Naval Academy, but some minor surgery held him up; he elected to enter Princeton, where he enrolled in the NROTC program. After his freshman year, he qualified for a place at Annapolis but chose to remain at Princeton. While at Princeton Joe excelled in his NROTC unit. He majored in aerospace and mechanical engineering and was a member of the Tower Club.

Upon graduation and commissioning, he was assigned duty on the destroyer U.S.S. Edson and completed a tour in Vietnam. He then went to flight school at Pensacola, Florida, followed by duty at Andrews AFB, near Washington, DC, and special flight training at San Diego.

Joe will be remembered for his personal warmth, genuine and likable nature, and positive approach to life. He set high standards for himself and lived by them. From an early age he aimed at a career as a naval officer. His commanding officer wrote of him: Joe was a truly outstanding individual in all respects and...was happiest when he was flying...I was tremendously impressed by his outstanding performance as a Naval officer and his exceptional ability as a pilot". Memorial services were held on board the U.S.S. Kitty Hawk and in Connecticut. To Joe's wife, Marcia, his parents and brother Hank and sister Betsy, we send our sympathy.

MacDonald Brooke Halsey '66

LT. Brooke Halsey was killed in action in Vietnam on July 21, 1969, after only two weeks in that country. Brooke came to Princeton from California's Thatcher School, the fifth Halsey to attend Princeton since 1879. At Thatcher, Brooke had tempered his verbal skills as a member of the "Notes" Board and a pivotal figure in the Debate Club; his tennis game was even more than acute enough to make him a varsity mainstay. But his true love is reflected in the recollection that Brooke showed "a profound knowledge of positively everything that has happened in America."

At Princeton, these dimensions deepened. Brooke played freshman tennis and was an active member of the Press Club; he was a correspondent for the Newark News, spent a summer working for the Club in Princeton, and became its Vice-President. A Colonial Club member, he majored in history, writing his thesis on the intricacies of American involvement in World War I.

The year after graduation, Brooke taught American History at the American Community School in Beirut, Lebanon. There he was delighted by the potential of the teaching profession, but was even more intrigued by Middle Eastern politics, read extensively in the field, and traveled throughout that area on vacations. Evacuated during the Six-Day War, he spent the following fall working for the Jobs Corps in Jersey City, awaiting induction. While more aware than most that he had to be IN the Army, he was not OF it, and continued his outside interests while at Fort Dix and Fort Benning.

For his wonderful sense of whimsy and the absurd, for his innocence without naivete, for his patriotism without fanaticism, for his F.D.R. imitations and baseball statistics, for his curious vehicular disability (he had a wonderful story about running into a cow while at Ft. Benning), we shall miss him. To his grandmother, Mrs. Woodruff Halsey '10, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Macdonald Halsey '40, brother Woody '69, and sister Comfort go our thanks for his friendship, and our deepest sympathy.

William N. Havener '66

WILLIAM NEWELL HAVENER, a dedicated father and husband, died Aug. 22, 1993, from complications of Lou Gehrig's disease. He was 50. At the time of his death, he was a lead engineer for Mitre Corp., directing research in its computer security group. He resided in Takoma Park, Md.

Bill had maintained intense interests in science, history, and politics since his undergraduate years. His skills as a physicist and computer scientist led him to Mitre, where he was well respected. As a senior, Bill expressed interest in teaching. As lead engineer at Mitre, he was the person sought out by his coworkers when they needed counsel with problems. He also taught computer courses at the college level near his Maryland home.

According to his widow, Gloria Ferrara Havener, Bill would want to be remembered first as a dedicated family man. He loved hiking, hiking, and camping — especially in the company of his two daughters, Andrea and Shannon.

Born in Concord, N.H., Bill prepared at the Lawrence Academy, in Groton, Mass. He was a member of the freshman wrestling team, took his meals at Cloister Inn, and as a senior lived in Walker Hall.

Bill dealt with his illness with courage and grace. The class offers its deepest sympathy to Bill's widow, Gloria; his daughters, Andrea and Shannon; his sister, Katherine Roper; and his mother, Cenith Havener. A quiet, dignified voice has been stilled.

Richard Wayne Hogan '66

Dick died March 8, 2008 after a brief illness.

A native of Richmond, Virginia, Dick graduated from that city's Manchester High. At Princeton he was a Woodrow Wilson School major and a member of Campus Club. He served in the Chapel Choir and as an Orange Key guide.

Following Princeton Dick earned a law degree from the University of Virginia. He then served in the Marines for three years. Upon his discharge as a corporal, he entered the private practice of law in Richmond. He continued in that career for the rest of his life.

Throughout his life Dick was an enthusiastic supporter of arts and community organizations—particularly historical organizations. He was a devoted volunteer with the Old Dominion Railway Museum, the National Railway Historical Society, and Historic Richmond. He also had a life-long love of music, throughout his life singing in choirs and performing in rock and jazz bands.

Dick is survived by his daughter, Rebecca Hogan; his wife, Ann Thompson-Hogan; her children, Kristin Thompson and Erik Thompson; and her grandchildren. The class extends its deepest sympathy to all of them.

Don Hubbard died early in our sophomore year from injuries suffered in an automobile accident in Rumpson, New Jersey. Don, age 18 at the time of his death, was the driver of the car. One of the three other passengers, Charles Cook, 21, was also killed. The one-car accident occurred at 1:30 am on Saturday, September 22, 1963. The car had just pulled out of a curve after crossing the Seabright-Rumpson bridge when it skidded and crashed into a tree.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald P. Hubbard, of Middletown, New Jersey, Don was born in Red Bank and later moved to Fair haven. He graduated from Rumpson-Fair Haven Regional High School, where he distinguished himself in football, baseball and wrestling. He is survived by his parents; his sister, Donna Louise Hubbard; and his maternal grandfather, Amiel Stalda.

Stephen K. Ingersoll died on Nov. 1, 1966, in Honolulu where he was studying psychological social work at the University of Hawaii. The Class is greatly saddened by his death.

Steve was born in Philadelphia and came to Princeton from St. George's School in Newport, RI. Majoring in History, he wrote his thesis for Mr. Baugh on the abolition of the slave trade in England. He was a member of the Colonial Club.

Steve was always interested in people and their problems. He spent his summers working in a state mental institution near Seattle and for the New Jersey Neuro-psychiatric Clinic. He planned a career in social work. He will be remembered by his numerous friends for his unique, wry sense of humor and his unusual generosity.

The Class of 1966 extends its deepest sympathy to his parents, Robert S. Ingersoll Jr. '38 and Mrs. Archer Ingersoll, and to the other members of his family.

Roger died peacefully December 27, surrounded by his family. Two weeks earlier, a few hours after decorating a Christmas tree with his wife and daughters, he had collapsed from a brain aneurism and cardiac arrest. He never regained consciousness.

Roger came to Princeton from the Lakeside School in Seattle. At Princeton he majored in Russian Studies, played freshman squash and varsity golf, and reigned as University pocket billiards champion. He served as president of the Young Republicans and as treasurer and president of Whig-Clio. Roger belonged to Quadrangle, where he was bicker chairman.

Following service as a lieutenant in the Navy, Roger graduated from the University of Washington Law School. He practiced law in Seattle for his entire career, specializing in real estate and estate planning. He had a deep interest in the arts and in works of beauty and was justifiably proud of the 3,600-piece stained glass window and the koi pond he built for his home.

Roger lost his first wife, Betttylou, to cancer when she was 42. Five years later he married Linda. In addition to Linda, Roger is survived by daughters, Jenni, Teri, and Julie, and two grandchildren. They have our deepest sympathy.

BILL KANE died by his own hand Oct. 30, 1991. His death deprives us of a marvelous intellect and a lively and challenging personality.

Bill came to Princeton from Baylor Military School (Ga.). He was a University Scholar and graduated Phi Beta Kappa, with honors from the Woodrow Wilson School. He received a Fulbright Scholarship for study in Colombia, and attended Yale Law School, where he was a law journal editor and an honors graduate.

Thereafter, his life followed two independent tracks. On the visible track, he was a lawyer and business executive, specializing first in international merchant banking with Citicorp, Continental Illinois, and Finoil. Later he turned to real estate workouts and was a pioneer in the recapitalization of real estate portfolios for California Federal and for F.S.L.I.C. He authored one book, Civil Strife in Latin America, and several articles and lectures on international politics and real estate recapitalizations.

On the less visible track, Bill continued to develop the expertise in military and diplomatic strategy that he first discovered at Princeton. He directed the Systems Intelligence Enhancement project of the American Society of Professional Strategists. He consulted regularly with a number of entities involved with our nation's defense. This work culminated in an intense involvement with Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm.

Bill leaves two children, W. Everett Jr. '93 and Katie, a student at the N.Y.U. Film School. Divorced, he spent the last five years with Deborah Hecht. To them, and to his many friends, the class extends its deepest sympathy.

Edward Lawrence Katzenbach III, retired teacher of debate, English, and history, died Aug. 12, 1997, at Georgetown Medical Center of complications of diabetes. He was 53. Larry graduated from Sidwell Friends School, was elected to Phi Beta Kappa and graduated magna cum laude from Princeton, and took his law degree at Harvard School of Law. At Princeton, he joined Colonial Club, was active in campus politics, and chaired the European affairs committee of the Intl. Relations Council. He served two years in the Peace Corps and taught a modern novel course at Walpole Maximum Security Prison while attending law school. Larry then taught for 23 years at St. Paul's School in Concord, N.H., with brief interludes at Deerfield Academy and in Barcelona, Spain. In retirement, Larry later taught poetry, essay writing, and world history as a volunteer at Mt. Vernon College in Washington, D.C. Larry was perhaps best known as a debate coach. Under his leadership St. Paul's School won more than twice as many trophies as did all the other New England Prep Schools combined. He was the founder and president of the Debating Assn. of New England until the end of 1994. His mother, Maude, daughter Allita Margaret, sister Matilda, and brother Eldridge survive Larry. Edwin Augustus Keeble, Jr. '66

Ed Keeble was killed in action in Vietnam Feb. 28, 1969. A Marine helicopter pilot, he died when his craft was hit by enemy ground fire in the A Shau Valley just south of the DMZ.

Ed came to Princeton from Deerfield Academy. An English major, he found time for lacrosse and the "good men" he valued so highly. He lived in Patton Palace and was a member of Cannon Club, where he was elected president his senior year.

A member of the Semper Fidelis Society while at Princeton, Ed wanted to be a good Marine pilot when he graduated. After completing basic training at Quantico, he went to flight school at Pensacola. He married Alice Orr (Happy) Collins on March 4, 1967, while still in flight school. He did well in flight school and, given his choice, decided on helicopters. Temporarily assigned to New River, North Carolina, Ed was ordered to Vietnam last August (Editor's note: 8/68).

Es was buried at Arlington National Cemetery with full military honors March 20, 1969. To Ed's wife and family the Class extends its deepest sympathy.

A memorial scholarship has been established in Ed's name at Deerfield. Any classmate who wishes to contribute may send a donation to the Edwin Augustus Keeble, Jr. Scholarship, Deerfield Academy, Deerfield, Mass.

Stephen Rice Koller '66

While at Princeton, Steve majored in electrical engineering and took his meals at Terrace Club.

After graduation, Steve earned his in master's in medical science from Rutgers and his M.D. from Mount Sinai. He continued with post-graduate medical training at the Medical College of Virginia, and did a residency in internal medicine and a fellowship in rheumatology. At the time of his death, he was clinical professor of medicine there.

He served as a major in the U.S. Army and received a Distinguished Service Medal. He subsequently developed strong interests and expertise in gerontology and served as staff physician for Beth Shalom Home of Central Virginia.

Steve possessed a boundless enthusiasm for all things medical. He was an avid reader and reveled in uncovering the "difficult diagnosis" or in explaining the obscure symptom complex. His memory was encyclopedic.

Equally boundless was his compassion for the sick and the not-so-sick-but-worried patients for whom he cared deeply. He approached medical problems as if he were in a competition. He was a tireless competitor. He confronted his own illness with determination.

An enthusiastic runner, wrestler, and musician, Steve delighted friends and family with his music, his energy and his compassion. His most significant life accomplishment, in his own eyes, was helping to raise his children.

Steve Koller loved Princeton.

Bob Lamberton, president of Lamberton Properties, Inc., died suddenly in his home, April 22, 1985. At the time of his death, Bob was actively involved in land development in Philadelphia, the home from which he entered Princeton. He had made real estate his career since his discharge from the Air Force in 1973 – holding positions of increasing responsibility with Strouse Greenberg, Rouse & Associates, the Broadbent Development Co., and finally his own development company.

Bob was a former national director and vice president of the natl. Assn. of Industrial and Office Parks, a member of the executive council of the Urban Land Institute, the board of trustees of Chestnut Hill Academy, the Philadelphia Cricket Club, and the university's schools committee of the Princeton Club of Philadelphia.

Bob entered Princeton from Jenkintown High School. At Princeton, he roomed with Tom Allison, Colin Hamilton, and Jim McAfee and took his upperclass meals at Colonial Club. He majored in politics and wrote his senior thesis under John Strange. Following Princeton, Bob earned his M.B.A. from Wharton.

“Lambie” will be remembered – and missed—for his affable and outgoing approach to his classmates during our four years together. JOHN GILBERT LEA, known to family and friends as "Biff," died by his own hand May 15, 1992, in Portland, Me.

A third-generation Princetonian raised in Princeton, Biff entered the University with the Class of 1966 as a graduate of St. Paul's School in Concord, N.H. He took his meals at Ivy Club. He played freshman and junior varsity hockey.

Described by those close to him as having an "artist's soul," Biff earned his degree in English and French literature. His desire to serve others led him, after graduation, to Kenya as a member of the Peace Corps. He spent two years working at the Farmers Training Center in the Kianayga area of Kenya.

In 1971, Biff joined Tower Publishing, a business owned by his father, Gilbert Lea '36. He later assumed the presidency of Tower Publishing. He was an avid sportsman and an outstanding marksman. He was Maine State champion in skeet shooting.

He was past president and a member of the board of the Children's Museum of Maine, a member of the Portland Rotary Club and the Maine Conservation School Board. He also served on the Town of Pownal Budget Committee and on its conservation committee.

Biff is survived by his son Timothy, and three daughters, Robin, Molly, and Kathryn. In addition, he is survived by his mother, Nancy Nalle Genung, his stepfather Alfred G. Genung '31; his father, Gilbert Lea '36; and his uncle Langdon Jr. '31. His father and uncle are the sons of Langdon Lea 1896. On April 5 Joe Luongo lost his seven-year battle with prostate cancer.

Joe came to Princeton from Orange High School, where he served as captain of the football and baseball teams and president of the student council. At Princeton he majored in economics, joined Tiger Inn, played baseball and freshman football, and chaired the Stock Analysis and Investment Club.

Following graduation he joined Bankers Trust in New York and then moved to Merrill Lynch, first in Morristown, then in Palo Alto. Later he and two colleagues left Merrill Lynch to form a financial services company. In 1991 he moved to Fairfax, Virginia, to be close to his son, Michael, and daughter, Alexa, and established his own consulting company.

Joe deeply valued his relationship with Princeton and its alumni. He was involved in alumni activities in New York, New Jersey, California, and the D.C. area, serving at various times on the Alumni Council and MacLean Society and as Regional Schools Committee vice president and class treasurer.

Throughout his life Joe reflected the best of Princeton's values. His death leaves the Class with a deep sense of loss. Our hearts go out to Michael and Alexa.

Dave McCarroll died Dec. 6, 2002.

Dave prepared for college at the John Burroughs School in St. Louis, where he was a National Merit finalist. He then followed his brothers, John C. McCarroll '57 and Henry Relton McCarroll '58, to Princeton.

At Princeton he majored in English and wrote a thesis titled "Ulysses Chaos and Cosmos." If that title is daunting, it could not have been any more complicated than Dave's submission to our 25th Reunion book, which cited Plato, Kant, Phaedrus, Wittgenstein, and Walt Disney, among others.

Dave roomed with Lauson Cashdollar and Dick White, and was a member of Quadrangle Club. He was active in a number of campus activities, including freshman soccer. Following Princeton, Dave earned a master's in English at U. Va. and a master's of library science at the U. of Missouri-Columbia.

Our last correspondence with Dave indicated that he was an instructor in the arts and sciences at the U. of Missouri-Columbia. His daughter, Sarah, reports that during his last several years, he devoted himself full-time to his favorite pastimes, reading and gardening.

George William Miner, II '66

It is with the utmost sadness that we report the death of our good friend and classmate, George Miner, of natural causes, July 23, 1986.

George was a lifelong resident of Washington, DC, and came to Princeton as valedictorian of Gonzaga College High School. While at Princeton he majored in Electrical Engineering, managed the fencing team, and roomed with fellow Gonzagan Owen Mathieu and later with Dave Richardson, Bob Warwick, and Jon Holman. He ate at Tower Club, where his engineering education was put to practical use and his zest for life was manifested daily.

After Princeton, George worked for several years as an educator, first at Gonzaga and then as vice principal at a school for disadvantaged children in Baltimore. He also completed his Ph.D. work in ocean acoustics, and subsequently joined the Johns Hopkins Applied Physics Laboratory, where he became a leading expert in oceanographic research on behalf of the US Navy.

George was a rare man; a student of life, a deep thinker, a writer, a generous spirit, and a loving brother, friend and son. As an undergraduate he was the only engineer accepted into the highly competitive Creative Writing Program. It was nothing for George to drop everything and fly cross-country for an occasion, and he was sorely disappointed when a typhoon grounded his plane overseas and kept him from attending our 20th Reunion.

The entire class extends its condolences to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Miner, of Washington, DC, and to his sisters and brother, Charlotte, Grace, Cindy, and William '72. A memorial scholarship in George's name has been established at Gonzaga College high School.

Born Edward Welling in Yonkers, N.Y., Ed was adopted by his mother's second husband, Clarence Nykwest. At Princeton Ed participated in theater. Afterward, he served in the Coast Guard, sailing around the world twice and spending six months in Antarctica.

In the late 60s Ed covered the Washington Senators baseball team for the Washington Star. Later, he ran a newspaper in Mt. Vernon, Iowa. In 1976, he and his wife, Beverly, acquired the Limestone Independent News, in Bartonville, Illinois, and ran it themselves.

From the mid-80s on, Ed lived in Alexandria and Stanley, Virginia, describing his occupation variously as author, poet, historian, and handyman. He was a frequent contributor of humorous notes and letters to newspapers and other periodicals, including a poetic lament to the PAW following Bill Bradley's loss of the Democratic presidential nomination in 2000. He also ran an on-line service offering assistance with writing projects.

Andy died Nov. 9, 2002, in an automobile accident in Georgia while returning from vacation.

Andy was with the law firm of Bower, Sanger and Lawrence in NYC, specializing in medical malpractice defense. He received his law degree from NYU and began his career as an assistant district attorney in the Manhattan District Attorney's office. For many years Andy volunteered as a reader for the New York Studio of Recording for the Blind, preparing audiotapes for blind lawyers and law students.

Andy valued his Princeton experience highly. He graduated magna cum laude with a major in philosophy and was a member of Dial Lodge. Andy was an alumni interviewer in Westchester County.

The organization that meant most to Andy was the Southern Poverty Law Center in Montgomery, Ala., which he had recently visited. Its cause, fighting injustice and bigotry, and its chief counsel, Morris Dees, were Andy's inspirations. Andy's brother, Eric, is a member of the Class of '69. To Eric, to Andy's wife, Carole, and their two children, Jeremy and Jill, the class extends its deepest sympathy.

John Joseph Secondi '66

Dr. John J. Secondi died May 28, 1985, of cardiac arrest after six months of treatment for cancer, in New York City. His loss came as a shock to his closest friends at Princeton, because it was not in his character to broadcast the fact that he had an illness he knew was terminal. The large number of friends who gave their respects at his funeral is an indication of the impact he had on people in a life that was simply too short.

John was born in New York City, but moved to Spartanburg, SC, at the age of four and attended elementary and high school there. He entered Princeton as a National Merit Scholar. He made Phi Beta Kappa and graduated summa cum laude, was co-editor of the Bric-a-Brac, and was a member of Terrace Club. His blend of humor, intellectual brilliance, and compassion for others made him the epitome of the kind of person many of us came to Princeton hoping to meet.

John received his MD from Vanderbilt in 1970 and started a surgical internship at Cornell, which he interrupted to write a book on medicine that was prefaced by the U.S. Surgeon General. He also wrote and edited educational videotapes, films, monographs, and programmed texts on various diseases. From 1973-1982 he worked in general medical clinics in New York City and was completing his third-year residency in internal medicine at Cabrini Med Center at the time of his death.

John is survived by his parents, Helene and Joseph Secondi, now living in Titusville, FL, and his aunts and uncles in Connecticut and NYC. To them all, the Class extends its deepest sympathy for the loss of a truly remarkable individual.

David Farrington Sexton '66

Dave died unexpectedly on September 26 while on a business trip in Boston. He lived in Greenwich, Connecticut, and had a summer home in Sargentville, Maine.

Dave graduated from the Hotchkiss School. At Princeton he was a member of Ivy Club and Navy ROTC. He majored in English and wrote his thesis on Joseph Conrad. After graduation he was commissioned as an ensign in the Navy and served three years, rising to full lieutenant.

After the Navy, Dave earned a law degree at the University of Pennsylvania and then joined the New York firm of Sullivan & Cromwell. From there he went to First Boston Company, where he began an illustrious career in investment banking, specializing in international finance. At his death he served as Global Alliance Representative for North America of IBS Securities, a Tokyo-based bank, and as senior advisor to Milbank Roy & Co., of New York.

Dave was active in community affairs and enjoyed sporting activities such as upland bird hunting and sailing. He was a past commodore of the Buck's Harbor Yacht Club, Brooksville, Maine.

John W. H. Simpson '66

The Class lost one of its most courageous members when John Simpson died of a heart attack while bicycling near Rocky Hill, N.J., Sept. 19, 1993. John's death occurred two months shy of the 10th anniversary of a near-fatal automobile accident, which had left him with severe burns and head injuries. He endured 52 skin grafts and other reconstructive operations, but eventually resumed his career as a photographer. With $22 million from an out-of-court settlement relating to the crash, John established a trust to aid burn victims and their families.

John came to Princeton from the Taft School, and as an undergraduate, he majored in art and was president of Theatre Intime and a member of Charter Club. Following graduation, he taught at Far Hills (N.J.) Country Day School and worked in the textbook divisions of Doubleday and Houghton Mifflin, before becoming a professional photographer. Many of his photographs appeared in PAW, and he shot the class's group pictures for our 15th, 20th, and 25th reunions.

The doctors who treated John attributed his recovery to his spirit and unflagging humor. John himself credited his family and friends. "Why is it," he asked, "that we have to come so close to losing life in order to truly cherish it?" John was the son of the late Wellington H. Simpson '31. Our deepest sympathies go to his son, Jamie; daughter Jebb; his former wife, Susan; and brother Peter.

Jordan Taylor '66

Jordan died Jan. 6, 2001, in Vienna, Austria, after suffering a massive heart attack during a squash match. Jordan and his wife, Kyoko, had moved to Vienna in 2000, when he was appointed senior vice president, international credit management, at Bank Austria.

He was an accomplished international banker, whose banking career had begun immediately after he graduated from Wharton Business School in 1970. Fluent in German and in Spanish, Jordan lived four years in Frankfurt, six years in London, two years in Madrid, one year in Milan, and was thoroughly at home in Vienna.

Originally from Yarmouth, Mass., Jordan was a strong and valued member of our class. His father was a member of the Class of '30. At the time of his death, Jordan was maintaining the '66 website from a server in Europe, and he had personally taken many of the pictures of classmates and class functions that are posted there now. Jordan had one son, Marshall Taylor. The class extends its sympathies to Kyoko, Marshall, and to Kyoko's two children, Ichiro and Susan Lambe.

Dag Tellefsen '66

Dag died on Sept. 12, 2000, of neuroendocrine cancer. Born in Oslo, Norway, he majored in civil engineering and served in the Norwegian Army Corps of Engineers after graduation.

In 1967 he married Bente Stavnes and moved to California to earn an MBA at Stanford. Working as a management consultant, Dag found his calling in international business management. He spent 20 years as a venture capitalist, where most of his investments pioneered new industries and some, such as KLA-Tencor and OCTEL Communications, became dominating players in their fields.

In 1982 Dag founded Glenwood Management, whose growth was aided by Dag's skills in internationalization and corporate partnering. In 1996 he founded Vision Capital to make trans-Atlantic technology investments in European companies.

Between 1988 and 1992 Dag chaired an advisory committee to Princeton's Computer Sciences Department and served on an advisory committee to the School of Engineering and Sciences.

Dag's daughter, Karinea (Tellefsen) Dykes, is a member of the Class of '96. Her husband is Robert Dykes, '93. Dag's father, Jens '31, brother Jens '62, and his nephew Jens '94, also attended Princeton.

To Bente, to Dag's son Tore, to Karina and to all other family members, the class extends its deepest sympathy.

John Orr Theobald '66

Princeton's lost a friend. We've lost a friend. Theo died of cancer in Phoenix May 1, 2003.

For each of us during that small number of life events we got to share with Theo, whether it was baseball, Tiger Inn, as a cheerleader, or on a road trip, he rewarded us with his intelligence, his curiosity, his inventiveness, and, oh, that sense of humor . . .

Theo knew about clams on the beach at the Hotel Del, desert flowers in and around his beloved Phoenix, real estate law, Indian rugs and jewelry, Southwest postmarks — anything and everything. To paraphrase author Howard Gossage, Theo knew more about everything than we knew about anything.

Beyond his curiosity and intelligence, Theo's greatest gift was to show us how full a life can be with a soft, rich sense of humor. Ask yourself — did anyone make you laugh as readily and as comfortably as John? What a smile! What happy, squinty eyes! What a laugh! His humor was never acerbic, never unkind, and ultimately witty, even the slapstick stuff.

God bless you, Jennifer, Laura, Patsy, Ryan, and Christopher. Goodbye, Theo. Thanks again for your friendship and humor; they've rubbed off on all of us. We'll cling to them forever.

James C. Westfall Jr. '66

Jay Westfall died Oct. 17, 2003, at age 60.

After graduating from Montclair [N.J.] HS, Jay followed his father, James '27, and brother, William '62, to Princeton, entering with the Class of '65. At Princeton he performed in the cast and orchestra of Gilbert and Sullivan productions, and played JV soccer and 150-lb. football, while majoring in English and taking his meals at Campus Club. He took a sabbatical after his junior year and returned as a member of '66. Though he spent only his senior year with us, he remained loyal to '66 his whole life.

After Princeton, Jay taught one year at Montgomery Country Day near Philadelphia, then turned to writing and publishing, which he pursued for the rest of his life. He continued to work with young people, coaching soccer, football, and baseball in Montclair for many years. He also wrote an instructional booklet called "The Straight Line Batting Method." Jay held numerous civic positions.

Writing was Jay's passion. In addition to educational and legal publishing, and freelance writing, he regularly wrote about youth sports for the Montclair Times. He edited The Glory Years: The Winning Tradition of Montclair Football, and at the time of his death, was writing a book about his great-grandfather's experiences as a Civil War battlefield physician.

Edward Bostick Whitman II '66

Ned died July 27, 1995 in Essex, Conn., after a yearlong, courageous battle with liver cancer. Born in Baltimore, he soon moved with his family to Avon, Conn. Ned prepped at Saint Paul's School and followed a long line of family members to Princeton including his grandfather, Edward B. '10 and his father, Horace B. '42, both deceased. He majored in history and was a member of Charter Club. After a three-year stint in the Navy, he earned an MBA at Columbia Univ. Ned worked for several firms before settling in Essex, Conn., in the 1970s. He established World Trade Associates. His business took him to the Far East, where he was involved in the importing of machine valves. Ned, whether at Princeton, in the navy, in the workplace, or at home, was always true to himself. He approached life with a sense of humor and directness that endeared him to family and friends. He is survived by his wife, Patty; two daughters, Maggie and Laura; his mother, Margaret; and a sister, Grace. To all of them we extend our sympathy.

Richard Irwin Wile '66

A native of Pittsburgh, Dick graduated from that city's Alderdice High School, where he was valedictorian, student council and debating club president, and captain of the golf team. At Princeton he was in the Woodrow Wilson School and wrote his thesis on the strained relations between Congress and the Supreme Court during Reconstruction. He belonged to Quadrangle, served on the business staff of Triangle, and won the Class of 1876 Debate award.

After Princeton, Dick graduated from Columbia Law and embarked on an impressive legal career, which took him from a position with the Wall Street firm of Hughes, Hubbard & Reed, to service as an assistant U.S. Attorney for the Southern District of N.Y., to appointment as chief of the criminal division of the U.S. Attorney's office in Atlanta, and finally back to Pittsburgh and private practice with his wife, Nancy Norkus.

Throughout his life Dick was an avid golfer. He was also a golf historian.

He is survived by his wife, Nancy; his brother, Jeffrey; and his parents, Marian and Robert. The class offers them its deepest sympathy.

Daniel Atherton Winterbottom Jr. '66

Dan died Oct. 28, 2004, in Dallas, from complications following heart surgery.

At Princeton, Dan majored in history, was a member of Campus Club, and served as managing editor of the Daily Princetonian. One of his notable achievements at the newspaper was securing an interview with George Kennan '25. The interview was featured in Princeton's recent centenary exhibit on Kennan's career.

Following Princeton, Dan graduated from the University of Virginia Law School and later received a master's in taxation from New York University. Dan spent his career practicing real-estate law in Dallas, most recently with Akin, Gump, Strauss, Hauer & Feld. He also had an avid interest in classical music and will be remembered by all who knew him for his keen and lively intelligence mixed with humor, and an appreciation of the absurd.

Dan's marriage to Carol Ann Rice Winterbottom ended in divorce. He is survived by his son, Brant; his daughter, Lena Winterbottom Brandenburg; two grandchildren; and his sister, Linda Allen. To each of them, the class extends its sympathy.
